

AND ANOTHER THING ...

Release the Colors of Spring

From muted fall tones to colorful springtime colors, choose a seasonal paint palette.

by Jana Rosenblatt Community Contributor

April showers bring May flowers – a season for transition! A tumultuous time of year with seasonal changes all around – the winds in Granada Hills let up, our California sunshine warms the air and the days finally grow longer – April is great for making big changes around your home. One of the best ways to make a huge difference in your surroundings and your outlook is through color. Take a good look at what you have and what you love. Select the perfect palette for the way you want to feel and prosper at home and work. If you crave the beach, create a palette with the colors of sea and sand. If you're an optimist who loves spring, bathe your home in warm sunshine tones and accent with the colors of newly sprouting grass and flowers. If your life is hectic and colorful by nature, we suggest muted gray tones, which doesn't mean a lack of color: It simply means the colors are more subtle versions of those you're attracted to. Your color palette can be based on a favorite painting, photograph, even a list of evocative words. By selecting tones based on your inherent personality and what attracts you, the resulting color palette will never get old.

Gray tones create a calm, relaxed feeling in this Jana-designed room.
Photo courtesy of Jana Design Interiors

This Jana redesign project took its inspiration from a favorite painting.
Photo courtesy of Jana Design Interiors

Sea and sand dominate the palette of this room, redesigned by Jana.
Photo courtesy of Jana Design Interiors