

Get to Know Designer Jana Rosenblatt

In the early years of my career I worked as a production and costume designer for film, television and theater. I learned to develop design ideas and interpret the creative visions of producers and directors. I began to design the homes and offices of many of the directors, producers and actors who I was working with. In 2001, I left show business behind and Jana Design Interiors was born.

In the entertainment industry I learned to adapt my design to the period, style and personalities involved. I work to bring together the personality of my clients with the architecture in their home or office. We help clients select the colors, materials and details they are attracted to. We help them pull those diverse elements and create their own unique style.

No matter what the project, I work to help make my clients dreams become a reality. My clients work hard for their money and my job is to help them realize their success by surrounding themselves with the lifestyle desire.

We do not want a clients new look to get old. In order to be sure an environment stays fresh and looks great for years to come, we feel it is important to make selections of things, colors and textures that the client loves. If this is accomplished, it should be timeless.

Every 10 years or so, an update can keep things current and interesting. Most people renovate or design their home or offices 1-3 times in their lives or careers; we do this work every day. Whether our clients are selecting colors, furniture and accessories, reinventing a kitchen or bathroom or creating flow for a business, it is our great pleasure to make the process easy for them.
